Gardens and natural areas are becoming more and more important as they assume the role of surrogate backyards for many individuals. These green spaces have universal appeal for gardeners, nature lovers, or anyone interested in either the cultivated curves of a well-executed landscape plan or the natural tangle of a wild protected space. As the largest state east of the Mississippi River, Georgia can boast of a wide variety of public gardens and natural areas. Th About the Author: Cindy Spicer is a member of the Garden Writers Association of America. Al Spicer has been a working photojournalist since 1969. He is currently a photographer for the Greensboro News Record. They live in Greensboro.
