0 of 0 review helpful Chicago Parks Rediscovered By A F Opitz The book is an excellent photo essay of some of the major parks in Chicago Some disappointment in the limited history of the individual parks Wish it covered more of the some 550 parks in Chicago Great photography With this exquisite collection of color photographs of Chicago's parks photographer and Chicago native Frank Dina has cast a fresh eye on these natural gems that dot our urban landscape From the sumptuous lake shore to the inner city these images capture the light color and mood of our public spaces throughout the changing seasons Frederick Law Olmstead's and Jen Jensen's vision of a garden in a city is reflected within the pages of this book The parks not only shape their surrounding communities they are as well shaped by the changing needs and missions of their inhabitants About the Author Frank Dina is a fine art photographer living in Chicago He was
